Junk cars okayed for bank protection

By KEN PETERSON

CARMEL RIVER land-owners have received more emergency riverbank protection help from Monterey County, but it would take a tax election to guarantee any permanent help in controlling future floodwaters, Bob Binder, a county flood control official, said Wednesday.

Erosion damage along the Carmel and Salinas Rivers prompted emergency action by county Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon Friday to permit the use of old car bodies to shore up threatened riverbanks.

Slimmon authorized the action because of the "extreme and continuing flow of water in the rivers of Monterey County."

County supervisors were informed of the action Tuesday but took no formal vote on the administrative decree.

Car bodies had been banned by state law but are being permitted by the Regional Water Quality Control Board to check erosion in this case because of the "emergency nature of the situation," according to Slimmon.

But any permanent maintenance program to protect riverbanks and flood protection installations would require a tax vote election, according to Binder.

Binder said the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will come in and restore flood control works damaged by flood — but only if it can get at no cost the rights-of-way and easements necessary to do the work. The corps also requires that the flood control works be maintained after they are repaired, which would take money.

Public tour of Marriott site promised by county official

The next major step in the battle over the proposed Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge will come March 29, when the Monterey County Planning Commission is scheduled to consider granting a use permit for the complex near the mouth of the Carmel Valley.

Carmel area residents will get a chance to tour the development site, on the Rancho Canada golf course grounds, and question the developers prior to that meeting, according to Planning Commissioner William Peters. Supervisor Sam Farr, Peters and Commissioner Paul F. Patchick will be on hand with developers to answer questions, according to Peters. No date for the tour has been selected yet, however.

"We'll schedule it sometime in March," Peters said. "We'll shut down the golf course, take a couple hours and have the general public there to ask questions."

"There's been a lot of heat on this," Peters said. "I want people to know what the issues are."

He said it will be easier for the public to understand the implications of the project and question it by touring the site because "people can't relate as well from a map."

Nick Lombardo, president of the developer, Rancho Canada de la Segunda, Inc., also supported the idea of an on-site tour prior to the Planning Commission meeting, Peters said.

"I approached him after a meeting and he was amenable," he said, referring to Lombardo.

Gerald B. Dalton, the attorney representing Lombardo, said the development group will present architects' drawings and artists' renderings of some of the buildings at the tour.

The lodge would cover 271 acres and include a 376-room resort hotel, all but nine of the existing 36 holes on the Rancho Canada golf course, tennis courts and other recreational facilities.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors accepted the environmental impact report on the project on a split 3-2 vote Feb. 14. Farr and Board Chairman Dusan Petrovic of King City, opposed the action. No time has yet been set for the March 29 public hearing on the use permit, according to County Planning Director Edward DeMars. Commission meetings begin at 9 a.m. in the county courthouse, Salinas.

DeMars said his office has not made a recommendation on whether the permit should be granted or denied. He added that there will be a planning staff recommendation before the commission meets.

While a Planning Commission vote is required on the use permit application, observers expect the issue will be appealed to the Board of Supervisors if the permit is denied by the planners.

Post office designer hired

Construction of a new $1.4 million U.S. Post Office that will serve most of Carmel's unincorporated area could begin by June, according to Carmel Postmaster Frank Ledesma.

The U.S. Postal Service awarded a $49,488 architectural and engineering contract for the new facility to Sebastian J. Bordonaro Associates, of Carmel. Ledesma announced on Tuesday. The post office will be built on an 85,619-square-foot site at the northwest corner of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard. The site was purchased for $428,095, according to Ledesma.

"We've waited a long time for this," Ledesma said. Construction could be completed in one year, he said. Bids for construction will be accepted when the design is completed, probably in about three months, Ledesma said.

The structure, including loading platforms, will cover 15,000 square feet. The facility will have about 1,000 boxes, service nine rural routes and handle 30,000 pieces of mail daily.

It will serve all of Carmel Valley and the coast south of Malpas Creek, excluding the zip code area served by the Carmel Valley Village Post Office.

The new building will serve as the main postal department for the area. The present Carmel Post Office at Fifth and Dolores will remain open and be called the Carmel-by-the-Sea station.

The zip code served by the new facility will be 93922, which will cover all post office boxes and general delivery. Rural routes will be covered by zip code 93923. The city of Carmel zip code will remain 93921. The Carmel Valley zip code also will remain 93924, Ledesma said.

GUIDE DOGS raised by Carmel Valley youngsters had to go back last week to the San Rafael organization that gives them to the blind. Here Denise Thome, the new owner of Bronson, a golden retriever, visits with Tricia Collins. Tricia, a member of the Boronda 4-H Club, raised the dog. Details are on page 2.

Farr asks disclosure of water commitments before meter ban lifted

A comprehensive report on the water hookup commitments of California-American Water Company may be requested by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors when it meets March 7.

The request for the information is contained in a letter to the State Public Utilities Commission being drafted by Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel. The letter asks that the information be provided before the PUC opens hearings on whether to lift the current ban on new water hookups in the Cal-Am service area.

A spokesman for the privately owned utility said Tuesday that the company would provide the information in response to a PUC request.

Farr brought the letter before the supervisors Tuesday, but asked that the board defer action for two weeks so some passages could be rewritten.

Leslie Kelsay, public information officer for Cal-Am, said that the PUC will likely set public hearings in April on an end to the connection moratorium imposed in July 1975. But a final decision on the issue may be as much as two years away, she said earlier.

The letter from the supervisors would request that Cal-Am "perform a detailed study identifying all the existing lots of record and their ultimate water usage before Cal-Am is allowed to commit water service to any additional new lot developments."

"This study would aid local governing boards in their land use planning programs to know the extent of water commitment to existing parcels and also protect the interests of those lot owners to whom water service has already been committed," the draft letter said.

New subdivisions and developments in the Cal-Am service area could wind up waiting in line for water behind those developments already in the planning stages, Farr said, in order to protect existing water rights holders.

The PUC study also would show if there is an "adequate water supply" to service any new subdivisions and developments.

With the completion of the Canada de la Segunda Pipeline and Begonia Iron Removal Plant in the Carmel Valley expected by April 1, the letter foresees "a request by Cal-Am to repeal or modify the existing connection ban" on the Monterey Peninsula.

The new facilities would increase the company's water production ability by 2,500 acre-feet per year.

EVERY YOUNGSTER who has raised a guide dog puppy knows what Tricia Collins is feeling as she and Bronson share a quiet moment for private goodbyes.

Valley girls complete 4-H project; say goodbye to dogs they raised

Year-long projects were completed early this month by two Valley 4-Hers when the puppies raised by Susie Brandt and Tricia Collins moved to a new plateau as responsible guide dogs.

Kent, a yellow Labrador retriever raised by Susie, and Bronson, Tricia's golden retriever, had lived in their Valley homes from three months of age until they were recalled at 15 months to the Guide Dogs, Inc., facility in San Rafael to begin their formal training.

The 4-Her takes a puppy, gives it basic obedience lessons, teaches house and car manners and most important of all — "socializes" with it. Every attempt is made to get them out in public and expose them to as many situations as possible.

These dogs had traveled with the girls in cars, buses, visited airports and ridden on trains including a trip to San Francisco on BART, and an Amtrak trip from San Jose to Salinas. As part of their project, Tricia and Susie also made several appearances before community groups, showed movies and explained their project to other 4-H groups.

Bronson and Kent completed their training in four months. Kent was assigned to blind student Mr. Chris Jones of Cheyenne, Wyo. Bronson was assigned to Miss Denise Thome of San Francisco.

Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., does not charge the blind person anything for receiving a dog, but retains ownership of the dog for its lifetime. The new blind master is given 28 days of training with the dog at the school in San Rafael, also free of charge. At the end of this period, the 4-Her who raised the dog is invited to come to the school to make an official presentation of the dog at graduation ceremonies.

Since Jones had trained previously with another dog, he only trained two weeks and went home before the formal graduation. Susie was unable to meet him personally because of midterm exams, but they made plans via telephone to get together in the near future in San Francisco.

Graduation day itself is a bittersweet mixture of sorrow at parting with a dog that had been an important part of the 4-Her's life and the pride of accomplishment in seeing that dog in its new role of responsibility.

Surprisingly, the meeting of the 4-Her and the blind student is seldom confusing to the dog. While ecstatic to see its young friend once again, the dog's loyalty belongs to its new master, and after exuberant greetings are over, it returns to the feet of the new master. Their common love for the dog leads to lasting friendships with regular correspondence.

Guide Dogs for the Blind is a nonprofit organization and receives no state or federal funds, but is supported entirely by private donations. The estimated cost of training a man-dog unit is approximately $4,500.

There is always a need for good puppy-raising homes. Youngsters between the ages of 9 and 18 who are interested may contact Mrs. Chip Collins, P.O. Box 333, Carmel Valley, for further information.

Two Valleyites share Mexican-style adventure

If you ask Edith Brattin or Sally Brandt the traditional "What's new?" be prepared for a very nontraditional answer. These two adventuresome women have just returned from shrimping—Mexican style—off the coast of Mazatlan.

At the invitation of Humberto Torres, a naturalist in Mexico, the Valleyites went in dugouts (due to the shallow water) poled by Mexican fishermen out on the waters 80 miles southwest of Mazatlan.

The Mexicans' unwritten laws of ecology impressed the guest fishermen, who noted that anything caught in the nets that was small or not usable was carefully returned to the sea.

With their catch — 40 pounds of shrimp — they went into a village beyond Rosario, where Anglos had never before been seen. Here they obtained ice for the trip to Rosario where they were guests of their Mexican friends for a shrimp feed.

The trip was a prelude to what will become Edith's way of life when she returns

HERE IS Susie Brandt with her guide dog Kent, the yellow Labrador retriever, and her brother, Bill Brandt, with Adolf, a German shepherd that graduated in August.

Luncheon theme is 'A time for fun'

"A time for fun" is the way the committee members are planning the March luncheon card party for the Carmel Valley Women's Club members and their guests.

Wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served beginning at 11:30 a.m. at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. Mrs. George (Lois) Toole is chairman of the luncheon which follows and has planned an elegant box luncheon. Turkey salad, cole slaw, finger sandwiches, deviled eggs, garnishes, coffee and lemon mousse will be included in the price of $3.

Comments on editorial

Dear Editor:

As a graduate of the Carmel Unified School system and as the mother of three children now enrolled at the three levels of schools in Carmel, I would like to give my reactions to Mr. Eisner's editorial in the Feb. 9 issue of the Carmel Valley Outlook.

The back-to-basics movement has indeed hit Carmel schools, mostly because of parental pressure. But there are a few teachers and administrators and school board members whose more conservative philosophy also tends towards this feeling and these people are listening. I know, because I speak for a number of parents who've become involved with the schools in the last three years and who have seen results in our push for more basics. On all levels, curriculum reform is taking place which tends to cut down on the number of courses taught, stresses stronger teaching and accountability in basic fields of study and emphasizes articulation among the three levels of education.

Still, much has to be done. The important thing to realize, however, is that parent involvement and interest can and has made a difference. It's slow going, but I have found forums where I can express my opinions and ideas for change. If enough of us care and go to meetings (offered nearly weekly at every level and open to the public), we will see continuing change. There is a vast system to influence, but there are some outstanding and caring teachers and administrators in this system and they will listen. Otherwise we are short-changing a lot of kids, who, given too many choices when they are young, are robbed of more important choices later, when perhaps they find, at 17, they are really not prepared for college and wish they were.

Lacy W. Faia
Carmel

Dear Editor:

Thank you, Al Eisner, for making the Carmel Unified School District a newsworthy subject. For several years, taxpayers in this school district have tried to get more press coverage of board meetings. Some even have tried actually attending the meetings. Several times there have been large numbers of people present when items of general interest were discussed. At very few of these well-attended meetings was the instructional program discussed.

People have been made to feel by the administration and the board of this district that they have no right to become involved in the instructional programs or the budget decisions of the district. Members of the public are not experts, it is implied. As a result, most people don't bother to go to board meetings except when an emotionally charged side issue — one not having to do with money or academics — is to be discussed.

It is possible for people to exert influence in these peripheral areas. However, in areas of importance — what children will learn and what it will cost — propaganda, half-truths, misinformation and reams of educationese have replaced any sort of meaningful discussion or communication.

Every parent is the expert on his particular child. Every parent has the right to make decisions affecting his child's education and is the final arbiter of what his child is to learn.

"Back to basics" is a wonderful slogan. And that's all it is unless people take action on a few basics of their own:

- The superintendent of a unified school district does not make policy for that district. The elected school board members design policy. If they ask for expert help, the superintendent provides it. He is not a member of the board, he is the head of the paid staff of the district and is in charge of carrying out the policy decisions of the board.

- The board members are not members of an exclusive social club. They are elected representatives of the taxpayers — not just the parents, but the taxpayers of the district. As elected representatives, they are responsible and should be responsive to the people who elected them.

- "Basics" in this day and age comprise a volume of information and skills hundreds of times larger and more complex than anything with which we (the last "basically" educated generation) had to deal. Adults who are antagonistic to the idea that this generation of children will know more than they must re-examine these feelings and not use "back to basics" as a means for oversimplifying what is available to students.

- Money alone will not provide solutions. Sincere effort on the part of the Carmel Unified School District board members and administrators to inform themselves and incorporate the public in the decision-making process would be a step in the right direction. Sincere effort of the public to communicate in an informed manner with their elected and staff personnel would be another. These steps involve many changes in attitude on both sides and will not be easy.

It was very thoughtful of Mr. Vance Frasier, principal of River School, to extend an invitation to Mr. Eisner to visit River School, but perhaps Mr. Frasier has forgotten that it is not necessary for any taxpayer to be invited to visit a school in his district. Nor is it necessary for test score data to be obtained by "personal effort" on the part of the principal. Any generalized test scores or other general data are available upon request to any taxpayer by law.

So smile. Ask for what you want and smile. Listen very carefully as the administrator or board member explains that it is your fault that he is unable to provide the information or service you require. Smile. Tell him you regret the difficulty he is having with his problem, but that he is elected and paid to solve this problem.

Likes Rippling River

Dear Editor:

In response to Sandi Lane's letter in the Feb. 9 Outlook we would like to say:

We are 38 residents now living at Rippling River Center and we are happy here and we want to remain here.

Rippling River was built to meet our particular needs. It is an Independent Care Facility for the young adult physically handicapped and the elderly and it is the only one of its kind in the U.S.

Carmel Valley should be proud to have this "much-needed" facility. It's a pilot project and we need the people of Carmel Valley to help us make it a successful one, so it can serve as a model for many more very much needed facilities throughout the country.

Through no fault of the people it was built for, its occupancy has been stymied.

People of Carmel Valley please help us by writing your congressman and your senator requesting that Rippling River be made ready and available for full occupancy by the handicapped for whom it was originally intended, instead of considering or suggesting that it should be turned over to some other project for which it was not especially built.

Inn not 'in'

Dear Editor:

The environmental impact report for the Marriott Inn near the mouth of Carmel Valley has been approved by the County Planning Commission. Many people say that this signals the eventual approval of the project. But how many of us know that acceptance of an EIR is based on whether the report is complete, not whether the impact is to be good or bad.

Based on current thinking, a complete EIR showing a negative impact on the environment could be approved and be a major step toward acceptance of the project. While an incomplete EIR indicating negligible impact on the environment could be rejected.

The complete, and therefore approved, report for the Marriott project has all the facts about air pollution to be caused by the out-of-town cars, buses and trucks servicing the 376-room tourist resort.

How could the project be approved on this basis alone?

LAND LEVELING equipment from Granite Construction Co. began carving out a niche for the Carmel Valley Ranch tennis club this week. The company will construct four tennis courts, two practice courts and a parking lot and will improve access roads on the property. (George T. C. Smith photo)

Phase one begins at Carmel Valley Ranch

THE BULLDOZERS began rolling this week on the first phase of construction for the Carmel Valley Ranch development.

Construction manager Sam Morse said grading for four tennis courts and a parking lot, plus improvement of the ranch access road, began Tuesday, with the tennis club complex scheduled to open in May.

The developers still must get a use permit to construct two practice tennis courts, which were left out of the original plans. A hearing on that application is set for Wednesday, March 8, before the Planning Commission.

Remodeling on three ranch buildings that would serve as clubhouse, lounge and locker rooms has been going on for some time now, but no earthmoving had taken place.

The tennis club portion of the ranch development was approved by the Monterey County Planning Commission in 1977. A golf course on the sprawling 1,700-acre ranch also was authorized although work on it had been banned until the end of mandatory water rationing. The golf course was denied by the Planning Commission, but the County Board of Supervisors overruled the decision.

Project Director Kay Chandler said he is still working on detailed landscaping and irrigation plans for the golf course. There is no firm construction date for that project, he added, despite the end to forced water use cutbacks.

A PLANNED 400-unit housing development and 100-unit golf lodge and clubhouse still needs approval from county officials. One condition for approval is that the ranch turn over 1,200 acres of hillside land to the county for public use while developing the remaining 500 acres of property. The land grant is included in preliminary plans for the development.

Granite Construction Co. of Pebble Beach is the contractor for the tennis club work. Chandler said Carmel Valley Ranch will construct the golf course itself.

According to Morse, the main tennis court in front of the clubhouse complex will be 6 to 7 feet underground, with a grass-covered earth berm around it for spectator viewing. Three other courts will be built to the east of the main court.

The club will include saunas for men and women, a restaurant, on-sale liquor and a swimming pool. Grand opening ceremonies will be in late May or early June, according to Morse.

CHANDLER said the restored buildings are "among the third or fourth oldest in Carmel Valley. They used to be an annex to the Del Monte Lodge; when the weather was bad, the guests would come here and go swimming."

Stucco work installed in the late 1920s is still good and is being used in the current clubhouse with just a new coat of paint. The old swimming pool will also be restored and reused.

The roads and parking lot will be surfaced with decomposed granite.

As for future development of the property, Chandler said he is working on plans for the golf lodge and housing projects to submit to the planning department. He is uncertain when the plans will be ready.

On Thursday, March 2, at 7 p.m., the Carmel Valley Library will host a visit by Cindy Barnett. She will be here on tour direct from our Monterey County Library headquarters in Salinas to present us with a Pajama Story Hour.

This story hour is open to all children from 4 to 8. Cindy is planning to tell bedtime stories and considering the lateness of the hour children are invited to wear their pajamas. The children's room will have a warm and cheery fire in the fireplace (for a change). Cookies and milk also will be served in honor of the occasion. I wouldn't want to resort to blackmail, but if we get a good turnout on March 2 more story hours will surely follow.

We've gotten in some new records and some new art prints which can be checked out. If you have an empty turntable or a bare space on your wall that you'd like to cover up, you might want to come in and look them over. We also have a cassette recording of The Music Man which is, according to rumor, the next play to be produced by the Jamesburg Players.

We hope the opening of the play will not encourage a rash of Marion jokes, but if it does, we do not want to hear them.

About 175 students from Carmelo and Tulare schools got a chance to learn about opera makeup and costuming firsthand when the Western Opera Theater gave them a peek behind the scenes Friday.

The opera company came to Hidden Valley for a workshop demonstration on wigs, makeup and costumes as part of a three-day tour of the Peninsula and Salinas areas.

Fourth and fifth graders, plus students in the Creative Response classes at the two schools, participated in the workshop. They also attended a performance of "Portuguese Inn" at Pacific Grove High School.

Western Opera Theater is the touring group of the San Francisco Opera. It is now in its 12th year of performances in the western United States.

The cast features young professional American singers who, by their training and experience, have met the requirements of the company. All have performed with the San Francisco Opera or other major companies.

The theater group has performed in 12 western states, from an Eskimo village in Alaska to a Navajo settlement in the rugged mesa country of New Mexico, while logging 190,000 miles on tour.

The company presents operas in English and travels with its own specially designed portable stage, lighting equipment and scenery.

Carmel five win third league crown

By JAY POSNER

After winning their third straight league championship, the Carmel High Padres traveled to Hartnell College in Salinas Tuesday to face Aptos High. If the Padres won that game, they will face the winner of the Monterey-Fremont Christian game for the Region IV championship Friday night at Hartnell.

Carmel finished the Mission Trail Athletic League season 12-0 for the second straight year by defeating Pacific Grove 58-43, Hollister 69-47 and King City 70-52.

Last week against Pacific Grove, the Padres fell behind 12-10 at the end of the first quarter and then saw Keith Nicks hit a jumper to put PG in front 14-10. After John Lucido and Mike Vucina exchanged drives, the Padres called time with the score 16-12.

After time was in, Lucido, Tom Frincke and John Frincke went to work. Tom Frincke hit a jump shot, Lucido made a steal off the full-court press and got a pass to John Frincke who hit a shot that tied the game at 16-16.

Carmel then ran off the next six points—on a Lucido drive, a Lucido jumper and a Tom Frincke eight-footer. Vucina cut the lead to four, but for the rest of the second quarter and part of the third, the Padres ran off the next 14 points before Nicks scored on a lay-up. By then, the score was 36-20 and the game was all but over.

By winning, the Padres edged into the Northern California High School Top 20. The Padres (21-3 overall) are now ranked No. 20, reaching the rankings for the fourth straight year. Aptos (22-1) also is ranked in the Top 20.

Tom Frincke led the Padres with 19 points and he also pulled in seven rebounds. John Frincke scored 11 points and had eight rebounds. Lucido had 10 points and a dozen steals.

Carmel was 24 of 42 from the floor, 57.1 per cent. Pacific Grove was much worse as they hit only 18 of 54, 33.3 per cent. Nicks with the Balers even got the ball into their half of the court. By halftime, the score was 47-23 and probably the only thing that kept the Padres from scoring 100 points was that they scored only nine points in the third quarter.

Tom Frincke and Dave Stevenson scored 14 points each to pace the Padre tenkamper and Greg Raynes paced the freshmen with 11 points each.

Friday at King City, the Padres breezed to a 70-52 win to post their 29th straight MTAL victory over the past three seasons. The Padres led only 30-25 at the half, but led by Tom Frincke, who put 24 points on the board, the Padres outscored the Mustangs 23-10 in the third quarter. John Frincke and Dave Stevenson were the only other Padres in double figures as they scored 14 and 10 points, respectively.

...But lose regionals

Aptos High School, showing hot first-half shooting and a tough zone defense, defeated Carmel High School 48-40 Tuesday in regional play at Hartnell College in Salinas. The loss eliminated the Padres from the Region Four finals. They finished the season 21-4.

Aptos moves into the finals Friday night against Monterey High School at Hartnell. The Padres defeated Monterey High both times they met this season.

Carmel limped into the game without two starters, Tom Frincke and John Whipple. Carmel took a 7-6 lead with three minutes left in the first quarter, but two unanswered field goals put Aptos ahead to stay.

The Padres fell behind 26-18 at the half, and farther behind, 40-28, after three quarters. But the Padres' fourth quarter full-court press led to eight straight points and a close 40-36 score.

But Aptos scored, then widened their lead with freethrows in the final quarter. High scorers for Carmel High are John Frincke, 12 points; Will Wilkinson, nine; and Dave Stevenson, eight.

13 and Vucina with 12 points led the Breaker attack.

In the early games, Pacific Grove won the junior varsity game 51-37 as Darryl Foster scored 18 points for PG. Paul Cater led the Padres, who were playing without three starters, with 11 points.

In the freshman game, Randy Albright's 14 points led PG to a 38-27 victory. Matt Nottenkamper led Carmel with 12 points.

Last Thursday night, in a game against Hollister, the Padres scored the first six points of the game before attack while John Frincke added 13 and John Lucido scored 11. Ed Cecena was held to 16 by the Padres, but he still led the Balers in scoring.

Each team took the same number of shots—60—from the field, but Carmel made 42 (60 per cent) while Hollister converted only 16 shots.

In the preliminary games, Hollister won the junior varsity game 21-20 and the Balers also took the freshman game 45-43. Art Strum led the junior varsity with 12 points while Matt Not-

Flood control tax debated

those assurances," Binder said, but it has not done so in the past.

He said the Zone 11 Water District would be the agency to administer flood control on the Peninsula, adding that the agency does not now have any taxing base.

Binder said a tax election for flood control "has been discussed from time to time but nothing has come of it."

JOHN WILLIAMS of Carmel Highlands, a member of the Zone 11 advisory committee, described floodplain areas as "unsuitable places to build. The river is inclined to meander."

He said he preferred not to assess taxes and take "a typical Corps of Engineers approach" to flood control, but instead to require irrigation of riparian vegetation as a method of bank protection.

During Tuesday's board of supervisors meeting, Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel asserted that "the county some day has to get control of the Carmel River."

The river is now entirely in private hands and bank protection is up to individual landowners. County employees did some work last summer clearing the river channel of brush.

While flood control aid from federal sources will not be available, Binder said the county will ask for an extension of emergency state aid beyond next Tuesday's cutoff date.

Binder said the county has received "several requests" for bank protection help in the Fawn Court area and from other homeowners. The county has probably not exceeded a loose $20,000 ceiling on the work imposed by the state, he said.

Protection work done privately by landowners before the county asked the emergency declaration on Feb. 14 will not be reimbursed by the state, Binder said.

MRS. JAMES Cowley, whose home on Fawn Court in Carmel Valley was one of four properties threatened by major erosion in recent weeks, was uncertain whether she and her husband would take advantage of the car use decree.

"We're using about 30 river jacks now and things are stabilizing at this point," she said. "The new channel is dissipating and the river is starting to move back into its mainstream."

"If God is good and the weather holds, we should make it through. We're hoping for the best."

Mrs. Cowley said some concrete rubble which might otherwise be put in a landfill is now being dumped below the Fawn Court properties to help stabilize the river bank.

Up to 100 feet of river-front property was lost from the backyards of three homes along the river when the stream changed its course and ate away huge sections of the bank. The erosion was checked within a foot of swimming pools in two yards.

For those landowners electing to use car bodies, criteria for their use include:

- That car bodies only be used for the current emergency and not become an ongoing program.

- That car bodies be installed in a "safe and permanent" manner so they will not move or deflect the stream and cause erosion to other properties. Once the river subsides, they must be anchored in place and planted over so they will not be an eyesore.

- That gas tanks, batteries and engines be removed before installation on the banks, and that brake lines be bled or removed.

- That those using car bodies sign a waiver with the county accepting the conditions for use of the cars.

- That all cars so used be identified and recorded, and that junk dealers releasing cars for bank protection first get clearance from the county zoning administrator.

Our youth: the other minority

Part one of a series on how they perceive 'home'

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

"If I had the answer I'd sell it, retire and move to Pebble Beach," said Officer Donald Fuselier, a six-year veteran of the Carmel Police Department.

What, then, should Carmel do for that "other minority," the young people?

Fuselier does not know. City officials do not know. Youth authorities throughout the Peninsula do not know. Worse yet, even the youngsters don't know. A few have theories, however.

They meet in Carmel to hangout

"Carmel is internally divided between being a retirement center and a tourist attraction. Either way the kids get shafted," said Scott Wilsdon, student representative to the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees.

More than 13 per cent of the population of Carmel is under 18, according to a 1976 state census. Most of these 628 juveniles are teenagers. In Carmel, the Valley and outlying areas, there are 2,960 youngsters in public schools.

Some youths complain that Carmel discriminates against them. "There has been a hassle over anything this town ever had for young people," remarked one teenager.

In Carmel, there is no recreation department and no playground. The three municipal parks are designed for "passive" recreation.

Almost one-third of the Carmel population is over 65. The median male age is 43. The median female age is 52, according to state statistics.

"Carmel must ask itself: What will do the greatest good for the greatest number?" said City Planning Director Bob Griggs.

The greatest number, far and away, is the adult population. They are a well-educated group with an average 15.4 years of schooling, according to the census. That is three more years than the national average.

But all that education has failed to provide a definitive answer to the question: What does Carmel owe its young residents?

THE CITY subsidizes one organization that serves a small percentage of the local youth. The Carmel Youth Center, at Torres and Fourth, is situated on city property it leases for $1 a year. Less than one-tenth of Carmel's young people "regularly" patronize the center, according to attendance figures.

With little else to entertain them, Carmel youths tend to congregate at a handful of local restaurants: Orange Julius, the Left Bank Cafe, Sambo's and the Straw Hat pizza parlor.

"It's almost as if the kids are begging for a place to go," said Steve T. Croswell, manager of the Orange Julius on Ocean Avenue.

Most of his young customers either are under 16 or do not have a car, he said. "Once they get cars, then they drive to Sambo's and hang out there," Croswell said.

He said he tries to discourage loitering. The youngsters have come to respect him, Croswell said, because he boots them out if they get rowdy. "They are basically good kids. It's just that no one cares," he said.

Many of the young people agree with him. Almost half of a Carmel High School "leadership" class say they feel unwelcome in Carmel. Twenty of the 28 teenagers in the class are student government representatives. The class, taught by Vice Principal Paul Sheckler, reviews all phases of community leadership.

"Everyone suspects you're a shoplifter," commented one class member.

Almost two-thirds of the class indicated they do not plan to remain here after graduation. Some said they are going off to college. Others indicated they are "bored" by Carmel.

A group of 12 Carmel High School students and one Middle School student, gathered at the Orange Julius four weeks ago, agreed the city is not doing enough for them. The students, aged 14 through 18, were skipping classes.

"Everything here is for older people. Everything. Then the old folks wonder why we have nothing to do," said one girl.

The kids grumbled that they must go to Monterey or Seaside to bowl or go roller-skating and all the way to Marina to ice-

DOES CARMEL offer its young residents enough to do? More than 13 per cent of the city population is under 18. Carmel has no recreation department and few youth-skate or to go to a drive-in movie.

WHAT WOULD the youngsters like to have? Five things were mentioned repeatedly by the 46 youths who were interviewed for this series: a place where food is cheap, a discotheque, a concert hall, a year-round swimming pool and an outdoor skateboard park.

Many youths said they would donate time and labor, such as painting fences or mowing lawns, to obtain the facilities. But time and labor does not seem to be the obstacle. The problem is the limited land available in the city limits and its high cost.

"A 40-by-100-foot vacant lot in the city limits would cost a minimum $50,000, no matter where it is," said Christopher Bock, president of the Carmel Board of Realtors.

Time and labor appears to pay the bills at one Carmel youth institution, the Carmel Youth Center. The 28-year-old facility operates on a $45,000 budget.

Youth Center board members claim 95 oriented activities. Devendorf park is a gathering spot to sit, talk, smoke and maybe even blow bubbles.

per cent of the money comes from the labor of its own members. The fund raising includes annual rummage sales and concession trucks that sell refreshments at Peninsula events.

The center owns eight trucks, called "Bingmobiles," four of which were donated by the Bing Crosby Youth Fund. The Bingmobiles also are rented to local organizations.

Although the current membership is listed as 240, about 100 members are "active participants" in the center, according to Manager Jack Giles.

Giles, 66, has managed the center since it opened in 1950. Giles lives in the center. He is responsible for overseeing its activities. He also helps raise funds for the center.

Board members say the center is completely self-supporting. There are two elected youth center boards: an adult board and a youth board. The adult board acts on requests from the youth board.

Last year, the youth board requested a television video game and a giant television screen. Both were purchased by the adult board.

For a $2 annual fee, local youths may use the center's facilities.

Giles has four assistant directors who work part time. As director, Giles earns $10,000 a year. The assistants share $6,000, according to Peter Tersol, Youth Center treasurer.

The center was built with donated labor and materials from local groups. There is one stipulation: only youth may use the facility. Any adult use could require back payment of all donated labor, material and funds.

"Once we let anyone in other than youth, we lose the Youth Center," Giles said.

But according to some Carmel High School students, the Youth Center has already lost a lot of its youth membership.

A GROUP of 46 Carmel High School students were asked to comment on the Youth Center. Those who had been there generally replied that the facilities offered are adequate. More than half the students had never been inside the center. Students complained about the name "Youth Center" and the lack of organized activities.

There is activity at the center, but according to Giles, there are no organized activities on a regular basis. "The kids don't go for that anymore," Giles said.

"The biggest activity here is making money to support the center," Giles said. Members sell food and beverages from the Bingmobiles at golf tournaments and local events.

The center has sponsored excursions to Santa Cruz and Marriott's Great America Park in Santa Clara in the past year. But the trips had space for no more than 30 persons.

The Youth Center has not sponsored a dance in almost a year. The auditorium where dances once happened has been converted into a skateboard arena.

Board members claim the youth lost interest in dances there. The $350 tab for a live band also is prohibitive, they say.

"Why should they come to a dance here when they can go to one at MPC and really have some fun?" Giles asked.

"I used to watch parents drop their kids off for Youth Center dances. As soon as the parents drove off, the kids went the other way," said Fuselier.

According to Tersol, the treasurer for the adult board, the center enforced dress code requirements at its dances. Girls had to wear dresses and boys had to be clean and neat.

Some youths said the rules are part of the reason why they stopped attending the dances. Others said smoking and drinking were discouraged by heavy adult policing.

The Carmel Police Department stationed officers at all Youth Center dances. Complaints from nearby residents, including a hotel owner across the street, often led police to demand that the amplifiers be turned down. This, too, some youths say, cut into dance attendance.

Carmel High School youths in the leadership class mostly disapproved of the center's use. One student called it "abused." Another said the center "is in horrible condition." Stated another student, "It's a mess." Students repeatedly complained that no one knows what goes on at the center. But few students were specific in their gripes. Some who complained about the center had never even been there.

"We would like to know what is wrong with the center. Perhaps we are too close to it," commented Tersol. He suggested that youngsters who dislike the center's operations should join and change it.

A SIMILAR youth center opened in November in Carmel Valley. The success of the four-month-old operation has been hampered by vandalism.

The Carmel Valley Youth and Community Center on Ford Road was vandalized in November by three girls and two boys, all of them 12 or 13, according to Ray George, a deputy at the Monterey County Sheriff's Department substation in Monterey.

A television set and three cases of soda pop were stolen from the center. A vending machine was vandalized and windows were riddled by BB gun fire, according to the sheriff's department.

The center has fewer than 70 members. But it is the first of its kind in Carmel Valley, according to Linda Nations, a community counselor with Carmel Unified School District.

"Kids are viewed as a necessary evil out here," Mrs. Nations said. She said she hopes a successful youth center might change that image.

She said the Valley provides little for kids to do and nowhere for them to go. "When they do find a place, they're usually thrown out," she said.

There is a reason for the problems at the Carmel Valley Youth Center, according to Larry Gardner, a member of the center's ad hoc adult group. He is not on the board.

"We are trying to satisfy the entire youth community with a very limited facility," he said.

There is only one room available. Because it is situated in the Community Center, local service group meetings there take precedence over Youth Center activities. On nights when there is a meeting of the Women's Club or the Lions Club, the center is closed to youth activity, Gardner explained.

There are tentative plans to expand to better accommodate youths and adults. But Gardner is skeptical about whether the center can adequately serve both groups. The young people would prefer their own center, he said.

As in Carmel, an adult board at the center governs a youth board. The adult board has asked the youth board to submit bylaws and a budget by the end of February.

But the time requirement was not

'We try to satisfy all youths
with a limited facility'

received well by the youth board, said Gardner. The youth board is unhappy with rigid adult board regulations, he said.

The question arises: To whom does the center belong? "That is the crisis," Gardner answered.

The center has no regular source of funds. But $2,500 was raised thanks to donations from the Crosby Youth Fund, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club. Youth members also raised $1,000.

A CAMPAIGN is scheduled to begin Wednesday to raise $60,000 for improving the structure. The adult board claims the funds are needed to enlarge the facility and better serve both youth and adults, Gardner said.

It is hoped that a successful youth center would curtail juvenile crime in the Valley. In a two-week period in late January, 23 juveniles, mostly 15 to 17 years old, were arrested for various thefts, burglaries and cases of vandalism stretching from the Valley to Pebble Beach. Some 56 homes and businesses were victimized.

"They are basically good kids," Deputy George said of the juveniles, "they just need something to keep them off the streets."

The city of Carmel suffered its share of juvenile crime last year, too. Although police reports indicate 79 juveniles were apprehended and cited by police in 1977, William Ellis, Carmel's police chief, estimates more than 200 complaints were filed against juveniles. Most of the complaints involved drugs and petty theft, Ellis said.

"Carmel is not the most kid-oriented town," admits Nick Nicholson, an assistant principal at Carmel High School. Every day about 150 of the high school's 1,100 students do not show up at school. Half of them are absent for a legitimate reason; the rest "just don't feel like coming to school," he said.

A student lounge facility might keep a few more students at school, Nicholson says. The school has no indoor area for student socializing.

Two years ago, the student government converted a part of the cafeteria into a student lounge. The plan didn't work out, according to Sheckler, the "leadership" course teacher.

Furniture was broken. Money was stolen from a jukebox. The cord to a beverage vending machine was cut. Litter accumulated. The project failed after just a few months.

There are few planned activities during lunch hour. During free periods, up to three hours a day, many students choose to leave campus. Many fail to return.

Two male students on their way to class eyed two female students heading away from campus toward Highway 1.

"Hey, aren't you going the wrong way?" one of the guys shouted.

"Naw," a girl replied, "you are."

NEXT WEEK: An array of possible solutions are presented by community leaders. But will any of them work?

JACK GILES, 66, has managed the Carmel Youth Center since it opened in 1950. The center owns eight "Bingmobile" vehicles used for concession sales and rummage collection.

feedbag

by lucy smithson

Spring has sprung, fall has fell, the grass is riz though it's colder than . . . ah, most of us would like it. Already we have seen the first rope burn of the season on a horse staked out to eat that tempting green grass.

"What would she want to go and do a thing like that for?" asked the horse's bewildered owner. "All that good grass . . . all she had to do was stand still and eat it."

What the mare did, of course, was grazed out to the end of the line, turned part way around, felt the line behind a hind foot, and then backed up in a panic. She had a typical grazing line burn across one hind heel. Ugly, red and raw but not serious. A week of cleanliness — washings followed by salve followed by a protective dressing — and the horse will be ridable again.

Every spring when the green grass grows horse owners face the temptation of staking a horse out to graze. Every spring, Ol' Feedbag tells you not to do it.

Before you can stake a horse out to graze, it has to be carefully trained (a) not to step forward over the grazing line; (b) to untangle itself by stepping backward over the line after it has stepped forward over it; (c) not to turn around on a grazing line; (d) not to panic when it finds itself tangled up.

That is a lot of things for a horse to learn. And not a single one is easily learned. None comes naturally to the horse.

It takes a lot of time — your time as well as the horse's time — to teach a horse to stake out. It's not something you can leave the horse alone to figure out. He won't learn anything by hurting himself.

Horses will continue to cut, bruise, and rope burn themselves with a grazing line until you think they're positively suicidal over it. Which they're not. Dumb? Yes. Suicidal? No. And they're not any dumber than the horse owner who thinks that continued rope burns will give a horse a college degree in stake-out lines.

"B . . . b . . . b . . . but!" stammers the optimist. "I've seen horses that were perfectly behaved on grazing lines. So why can't I teach my horse to be the same way?"

Well, if you must know . . . if you absolutely insist . . . we will admit it is possible to train a horse to stake out. But it's a lot harder and it takes a lot longer than you might think.

You start training a horse to stake out by picking a soft, obstacle-free piece of ground where there isn't anything to eat. A sand arena is ideal. Even better is a sand arena with a single elderberry tree growing in the middle, which is what we've got in back of our house. Maybe a black walnut or a cypress would work as well. What these species have is long springy branches low to the ground.

The horse is staked out to something springy and close to the ground. Since there is nothing to eat, his head is the highest point of the stake out. When he pulls on the line, it pulls back and down. When he slacks off, the line slacks off.

Lacking a low branch on a springy tree, fasten a metal spring or rubber innertube to a movable but heavy object. A tractor tire makes a good stakeout trainer, since a horse won't move it far or hurt himself if he fights it.

For all training sessions — and these may go on daily for weeks, until you are absolutely certain of your horse — wrap legs first in shipping boots or bandages. Wrap right down around the pasterns and hooves and use plenty of padding. Don't use bell boots, though.

Then you stick around where you can watch the horse, or soothe him or, when necessary, rescue him. Don't leave him alone.

For a stake-out line, use a skinny, breakable rope run through a stiff plastic or rubber garden hose. Plastic hose is best because it is so unyielding on cold days. Unyielding is the way you want it to be, so maybe you only train during the cold part of the day. The garden hose keeps the line from kinking. When it wraps around a leg, the wrap springs open when the horse slacks off. Also, the hose is not so likely to cause rope burns.

When you switch to real stake-out lines, always use inch-thick sisal rope. Nylon or plastic ropes burn terribly. Skinny ropes cut. Never use a nylon lunge line for staking out — it has a double knife-edge on it.

Fasten the stake-out line to a non-slip neckband adjusted snugly behind the horse's ears. It has to be snug enough not to catch a hind foot should the horse decide to scratch his ear.

Do not use a halter. Halters are notorious for trapping hind-foot-ear-scratchers. Also, horses that grow accustomed to being staked out by their halter get to be tough nosed and hard to lead.

When the horse has learned not to fight the stake-out line, he may be fed his hay while staked out. Put the hay almost to the furthest reach of the stake-out line.

It is best not to put water buckets near the horse while staked out. Many horses (and ALL ponies) paw the ground when they know they are tied. A water bucket is a foot trap for the staked-out horse. Take water to him or take him to water as often as necessary. That's every couple of hours when eating dry feed, maybe half that often on green, juicy grass.

A horse must never be staked out by his lonesome self. A horse is a herd animal. And a horse is imaginative. By himself he is likely to imagine that his herd is calling him and try strenuously to leave the place where he is staked out.

Therefore, a horse must always have a member of its herd tethered quietly nearby. If there are two horses quietly staked out, everything is copacetic. If only one is being taught to stake out, the other must be tied up short to babysit him.

If this is the only horse in the neighborhood, he undoubtedly thinks of some human as belonging to his herd. That human then has to stay with him the entire time that he is staked out. In which case, you might just as well hand graze him.

Even when two horses are staked out, a human must check on them frequently. Plenty of horses learn to wait patiently for a human to come untangle them; very few horses learn to untangle themselves.

You can easily see that if your time has any value at all it is not possible to save much on the price of hay by staking horses out to grass. It has its convenience value though in ridding wastelands and unmowable hillsides of fire hazard grasses.

And then there was last weekend. The kids announced Saturday night that they had just fed the last of the hay cubes. ("Why didn't you say so sooner?") Because it was a holiday weekend the feedstore would not open until Tuesday. So the herd went onto grazing lines for most of Sunday and Monday. Very convenient . . . even if it did take the Thoroughbred a year of training before he learned to step backwards over the line after stepping forwards over it.

THEY CALL ME "Ol' Man Mose" cause I shore do kick the bucket.

'PTA with teeth' forms at high school

Applications are now being taken for membership in a new advisory council on programs and policies at Carmel High School.

Under state law, each school in California is required to set up such a School Site Council, according to Bobbi Watson, co-president of the Padre Parent Board.

The councils will be "a PTA with teeth," according to Mrs. Watson. They will give advice on where money should be spent in individual schools, on curriculum changes and other aspects of managing the campuses.

The high school council will have 12 members — six parents, students and community members; four teachers; and two administrators or non-teaching school employees.

The council will meet a minimum of four times per year and membership terms will be a minimum of one year, according to Mrs. Watson.

One major issue facing the council is entry into a new state funding program which provides $30 per pupil to upgrade educational programs and improve student academic performance.

Mrs. Watson said the council is "mostly for communication" between parents, students, community members and school staff members on issues of mutual concern. She said that Principal Dan Stevenson favors the council.

She emphasized that community members who are not parents of school-age children are particularly desired as council members.

Applications can be submitted by mail to the high school, sent c/o Parent Faculty Committee or by telephoning Mrs. Watson (625-2093), Barbara Stanford (624-2990) or Vivian Drye (624-5417). Any questions also should be directed to her.

Council members will be selected March 10 at noon during a meeting in Stevenson's office.

Similar selection processes are going on in all district schools.

Jose Molina's Bailes Espanolos to perform March 16 in Carmel

The dream of every dancer is to have his own company. Not many are able to achieve their goal, but Jose Molina, who will appear with the Jose Molina Bailes Espanolos at Sunset Center in Carmel March 16, did so while still in his 20s.

Born in Madrid, Molina started to dance at the age of 3. He continued to express such feeling for the dance throughout his childhood that his parents enrolled him as a student of Classico Espanole with Pilar Monterde in Madrid on his ninth birthday. After a year of lessons, Senora Monterde recognized a strong strain of flamenco rhythm in his style and urged him to pursue that dance form as well as classic.

When he was 14, he auditioned and was accepted for the role of second dancer in the company of the famed Soledad Miralles, and, at 17, he made his first European tour.

He made his television debut on the Steve Allen Show while he was still a teenager. Among the viewers was Jose Greco, who invited the young man to join his company as first dancer.

Molina remained with Greco for five years before forming his own company. The Jose Molina Bailes Espanolos tours North America every year and will make its third appearance in Carmel this March.

The concert at Sunset Center is nearly sold out, but remaining seats may be reserved by phone, 624-3996.

Sierra Club plans two weekend hikes

Hikes in Andrew Molera Park and the Forest of Nisene Marks near Aptos are planned by the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club for this weekend. Members of other chapters and interested nonmembers are welcome to join the outings.

An easy four- to five-mile stroll in Molera Park is planned Saturday, Feb. 25. Hikers will go part of the way up Pfeiffer Ridge, over to the beach and return along the Big Sur River. Bring lunch (to eat on the beach), water and hiking boots. Meet at Brinton's in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel, at 9 a.m. For more information phone leader Roy Anderson, Salinas, 1-449-0162.

Hikers will meet at 8:30 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 26, at Cinema 70 in the Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey, to form carpools for the 45-mile trip to the Nisene Marks entrance just outside Aptos.

A loop trip of approximately six miles with an elevation gain of 300 feet is planned along the center loop trail to Hoffman Camp and then down an old logging chute to China Camp for lunch.

Bring lunch, water and boots and the suggested carpool fee of $2.

For more information, phone leader Merrill Jones, 624-3052.

Also on the Sierra Club outing calendar is a youth group hike to Bluff Camp Saturday, Feb. 25. The scenic eight-mile hike will follow a route around Los Padres Dam, the reservoir and Carmel River.

Hikers will meet at 8:30 a.m. behind Brinton's. Bring lunch and water. For more information, phone leader Russ Schwanz, 375-9169.

Steinbeck drama to be staged

The Forest Theater Guild will present John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men and William Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part 1 this summer at the Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. Production dates have not yet been approved by the city of Carmel.

The 1978 summer productions will be the seventh annual series presented by the Forest Theater Guild, a nonprofit organization of Monterey Peninsula residents formed to preserve the Forest Theater.

The Steinbeck classic will be directed by Cole Weston, a world-famous photographer who has directed many shows at the theater.

Richard Geer, who directed Twelfth Night at the theater last summer, will direct the Shakespeare play.

All roles in both productions (including Lenny in Of Mice and Men and Sir John Falstaff in Henry IV) will be open for auditions. Of Mice and Men casting will be scheduled in late March or early April and Henry IV tryouts will be in late April.

The Forest Theater Guild is seeking volunteers as assistant directors, stagehands, set builders and painters and costume sewers.

For more information, phone Cole Weston, 624-2764, or Guild President Jeff Hudelson, 624-2179.

Orpheus Ensemble concert Friday

Five members of the Orpheus Ensemble will present the third concert in the Chamber Music Society season Friday, Feb. 24, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m. The Nash Ensemble, originally scheduled to perform Friday, has canceled its national tour.

Described by the New York Times as a "crack young musical group," the Orpheus Ensemble was founded in 1972 by cellist Julian Fifer. The 25-member ensemble appears regularly in New York at Avery Fisher Hall, Carnegie Hall and Alice Tully Hall. The group performs without a conductor, which prompted the New York Times to describe the group as "a headless wonder—a group of 25 youthful instrumentalists without a conductor who play so well that they obviously don't need one."

The program will include Trio in E-flat, K. 498, for clarinet, viola and piano, by Mozart; String Trio, Opus 9, No. 3, by Beethoven; Contrasts, by Bartok; and Piano Quartet in C minor, Opus 60, by Brahms.

Ensemble members to appear in Carmel are Fifer; David Singer, clarinet; Joanna Jenner, violin and viola; Naoko Tanaka, violin and viola; and Patricia Michaelson, piano.

Other concerts scheduled by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula will be given by the Tokyo String Quartet Thursday, March 9; Trio Concertante, Tuesday, April 4; and ensemble award winners Sunday, May 14.

National Ballet of Illinois to dance Tuesday

The National Ballet of Illinois, a touring ballet company, will appear Tuesday, Feb. 28, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

The program will include Les Sylphides, a romantic ballet with choreography by Michael Fokine to music by Chopin; Facade, a witty, urbane spoof originally choreographed by Sir Frederick Ashton for the Sadlers Wells Ballet; and George Balanchine's Pas de Dix, a sparkling upbeat ballet with music from Glazounov's score for the ballet Raymonda.

The company, on its first tour of the West Coast, has toured extensively throughout most of the country and in Great Britain. The 28-member troupe is directed by Gwynne Ashton, former associate artistic director of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

The company's Carmel appearance is sponsored by the National Academy of Arts with assistance from the Freitas Foundation. Walter Freitas, one of the trustees of the foundation, is a resident of Monterey.

Tickets, at $6.50 general admission and $4.50 for students and senior citizens, are available at the Julia Marlowe Box Office at Sunset Center; Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey; and Lily Walker Records, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove.

Tickets will also be available from 6 p.m. on the evening of the performance. For more information, phone 624-3996.

Show about Far East

"A Visit to Cambodia and Bali" is the title of a presentation Wednesday by Ted Lachelt at the Carmel Foundation. The lecture starts at 2:30 p.m. in Diment Hall.

Included will be photography of a royal cremation process. Lachelt lives in Del Mesa Carmel. Admission is free and the program is open to the public.

Fiesta de los Amigos planners meet

The 1978 Fiesta de los Amigos was a step closer to happening following a meeting of committee heads last week at the home of general chairman Mrs. Richard (Olene) Dick.

Booth reservations for barbecued chicken, tacos, hot dogs and hamburgers have been made to date by the Carmel Valley Kiwanis, Lions and Fire Department for the May 6 event at the Holman Guest Ranch.

The sponsoring Carmel Valley Women's Club will call its project "The General Store" and various local women's organizations will offer a variety of sweets and baked goods.

Dr. Clancy W. Van Horn has consented to act as master of ceremonies and the Spanish Ball, which will cap the festivities, will be at the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

The search for costumes is underway. Since this is a family affair, you would be well advised to begin sewing — or to make costume reservations for the May Fiesta soon.

Obituaries

Valley rancher succumbs to illness

Lifetime Carmel Valley rancher Andrew B. Blomquist, 92, died Feb. 8 at Community Hospital following a brief illness.

Born in 1885 in Monterey

County, Blomquist took over Rancho los Conejos from his father, Andrew, a 19th-century immigrant from Sweden. He raised cattle on the upper Carmel Valley ranch.

Blomquist never married. Survivors include his sister, Adda Blomquist of the Monterey Peninsula area and a niece in Southern California. Another sister, Charlotte Cahoon, died in 1973.

Leo Berta of Carmel Valley has leased most of the ranch from the Blomquist family for the past six years. There were no funeral services. Cremation was arranged through the California Cremation Society with private inurnment in Salinas.

Mrs. Rudolph to be buried in Arizona

The body of Bergliot S. Rudolph, who died at Carmel Valley Manor on Feb. 16, was buried this week at East Lawn Cemetery in Tucson, Ariz. Mrs. Rudolph was 80.

Born in 1898 in Sioux Falls, S.D., she was a student at Wellesley College and received her degree in physical education from Columbia College of Physical Education.

She married Dr. Royal W. Rudolph after teaching for four years and the couple moved to Tucson in 1931. In 1962, they moved to Carmel Valley. Her husband died in 1971.

During World War II, Mrs. Rudolph was the chairman of the Tucson Red Cross Motor Corps and she had served as both the county and state president of the Arizona Medical Association Auxiliary.

She is survived by a daughter, Antoinette Barnard, of Phoenix, Ariz., and six grandchildren, Wilfred R. Barnard, of Salisbury, N.C., and Ann Barnard, Royal W. Rudolph III, Mark Rudolph, Karla Rudolph and Karen Rudolph, all from Phoenix. A son, Dr. Royal W. Rudolph Jr., died in 1975.

The family suggested memorial contributions to St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church or the Carmel Valley Manor Scholarship Fund.

Trumpet player dies at home

William E. Sears, a musician who once played with pianist Peter Duchin, died Friday at Community Hospital after collapsing at his home in Carmel Valley. He was 57.

Services were conducted at the Little Chapel by the Sea and his ashes were scattered at sea.

Born in 1920 in Martinez, Sears played the trumpet and worked for more than 20 years in New York. He had performed at the White House. For the last three years, he had been employed at the Grapevine Liquor Store in Carmel Valley.

He is survived by his widow, Adele Sears, of Carmel Valley; a daughter, Brett Sears, of Las Vegas, Nev.; and a sister, Elinore Ritter, of Stinson Beach.

He was the chairman of the Beacon House Association of Pacific Grove. The family requested that any memorial contributions be made to the Beacon House.

Peruvian artist's work is on exhibit

An Artist's Odyssey in the Peruvian Jungle, a full-length movie travelog about Francisco Grippa's adventures while living with the Indians of the Amazon, will be screened Friday, Feb. 24, at 8 p.m., at the Terrace Room of La Playa Hotel, Eighth and Camino

Real, Carmel.

Grippa will narrate the program, which is sponsored by Lupetti Gallery in conjunction with the opening of his exhibit Saturday, Feb. 25, at the gallery on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel.

A native of Peru, Grippa studied art in Spain, Paris and London before opening his studio-gallery in Hollywood.

In 1974, Grippa says, "I began to feel as if the world were 'dehumanizing' me. I had to get away from the pressures, the blight a big city can put on one's spirit."

The paintings to be exhibited at Lupetti Gallery are on lanchma cloth with colors gathered in true native style from roots, leaves, seeds and bark.

Everyone is welcome to attend the free program. For more information, phone 625-1281.
